The Mosaic Mobile short film competition celebrates the voices and narratives of high school students from all backgrounds and skill levels. An inclusive platform, it empowers participants to embrace creativity using their unique perspectives to tell authentic, impactful stories with mobile devices.

In an era when storytelling and digital media skills are essential, Mosaic Mobile prepares students for the future and initiates meaningful dialogue among young people. Arts with impact: through storytelling.

Students Make Mobile Films

Students will use creativity, collaboration and critical thinking skills to shoot, edit, and enter a two-to-three-minute short film made entirely on a mobile device (phone or tablet) allowing them to embrace their narrative, elevate their voices and understand that every story matters.

Why Mobile?

With mobile technology leveling the content creation playing field, we show students they can use tools they already have to tell original and impactful stories. Using mobile storytelling to emphasize skills that use digital technology but are driven by human creativity.

We acknowledge the challenges students navigate in their lives, and through Mosaic Mobile, we aim to create a safe space for them to explore these complexities, channel their experiences into powerful stories, and find strength in sharing their authentic narratives.
